

Rhode Island's Budget Crisis:

What Should be Done?

Please join us for a discussion about Rhode Island's current budget deficit and taxation policy. The current fiscal crisis will be reviewed with a focus on how the state's finances became so troubled. Components of the Governor's Fiscal Year 2010 budget will be explained and responsible alternatives will be presented to ameliorate the ongoing structural deficit. Since 2004, Rhode Island's structural deficit has grown each year, despite the repeated claim that tax cuts for the wealthy will generate jobs and grow our economy. The Governor has proposed a budget that would handicap Obama's stimulus plan by limiting the investments needed for a strong economy and healthy communities.

For your convenience, the budget presentation will be given in six different locations around the state.
